PHILIPP SAYS MEASURE IS UNCONSTITUTIONAL

Governor, in Vetoing Fletcher Bill, Sees no Benefit for Soldiers

When Governor Philipp vetoed the Fletcher bill providing for an appropriation of $1,000,000 for the settlement of soldiers and unemployed on farm lands in Wisconsin, he once more supported his action by claiming the legislation was unconstitutional.

"This bill is clearly a violation of several constitutional provisions," the governor declared. "The constitutional limits provide as follows: 'The state shall never contract any debt for works of internal improvement or be a party in carrying on such work.' The clearing of land and other improvements authorized by this bill cannot be construed otherwise than internal improvements. The state is prohibited from contracting any debt excepting for the purpose of defraying extraordinary expenditures by the state not exceeding in the aggregate $100,000.

"It is difficult to see wherein the soldier is given any right under this bill not given to every other citizen. Any citizen residing anywhere in the United States, who does not own $300 worth of agricultural land is just as eligible to the privileges contained in this bill as is the soldier. Any multimillionaire, it matters not where he resides prior to the purchase of the land, may take advantage of the provisions of this bill and acquire property for his summer resort of for other purpose and enjoy every right and privilege that is granted to the soldier. It seems to me that the conclusion is inevitable, that the soldier was brought into this bill to give it a clear road through the legislature."

FORMER BASEBALL MAN HERE "Pete" Schreiner Visits in City a Few Days Last Week

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Schreiner of Chicago returned home Friday after visiting relatives in the city. Both Mr. and Mrs. Schreiner are former residents of Stevens Point. Mrs Schreiner will be better known as "Pete." He played ball in Stevens Point several years ago, when the redoubtable Cy Young pitched Stevens Point baseball teams to victory Pete was manager of the Stevens Point team for several years and played third base.

Both Mr. Schreiner and Cy Young are now employed in Chicago and are still playing semi-pro ball. Young is pitching and Schreiner is playing third base on a Western Electric company

Wool Market Continues It's Upward Tendency

Boston-wool continues to advance in price. Choice Ohio Delaines—a barometer of the trend—are now selling around $2.10 a pound on the clean basis. This compares with around $1.70 three months ago, an increase of 40 cents or over 23%.

Montana fine staples show a corresponding rise. Today they cost $1.90 a pound clean, compared with $1.60 last May, an advance of 30c or better than 18%. Wool has been on the upswing since the first of the year, particularly the better grades.

The price of wool will remain high for some years. Why not take advantage of this opportunity. We will help you to finance ten or more sheep. Talk this over with Mr. Dunegan.

CHAPTER XIX

A. Trip by Night and a Late Arrival. Shortly after sundown that evening, the Rushcroft company evacuated Hart's Tavern. They were delayed by the irritating and, to Mr. Rushcroft, unpardonable behavior of two officious gentlemen, lately arrived. who insisted politely but firmly on prying into the past, present and future history of the several members of the organization, including the new "backer."

Barnes had devised a very clever plan for getting Miss Cameron away from the tavern without attracting undue attention. She was to leave in one of the automobiles that he had engaged to convey the players to Crowndale, where they were to "show." In case of detention or inquiry, she was to pose as a stagestruck young woman who had obtained a place with the company at the last moment through his influence.

When the hour came for the departure from Hart's Tavern he deliberately engaged the two secret service men in conversation in the taproom. Miss Cameron left the house by the rear door and was safely ensconced in Peter's automobile long before he shook hands with the "rat-catchers" and dashed out to join her. Tommy Gray's car, occupied by the four players, was moving away from the door as he sprang in beside her and slammed the door.

Peter's efforts to stay behind Tommy's venerable but surprisingly energetic car were the cause of many a gusp and shudder from the couple who sat behind him in the bounding car. He had orders to keep back of Tommy but never to lose sight of his tail light.

"Are you there?" he whispered. "Yes. Isn't it jolly, running away like this? It must be wonderfully exciting to be a criminal, always dodging and-"

"Sh! Even a limousine may have

But if the limousine had possessed a thousand ears they would have been rendered useless in the stormy racket made by Peter's muffler and the thunderous roar of the exhaust as the car got under way.

Sixty miles lay between them and Crowndale. Tommy Gray guaranteed that the distance could be covered in three hours, even over the vile mountain roads Ten o'clock would find them at the Grand Palace hotel, none the worse for wear, provided (he always put it parenthetically) they lived to tell the tale! The luggage had gone on ahead of them earlier in the day.

Soon after ten o'clock they entered the town of Crowndale and drew up before the unattractive portals of the Grand Palace hotel An arc lamp swinging above the entrance shed a pitiless light upon the dreary. Godforsaken hostelry with the ironic name

Miss Cameron was warmly consclous of the thrill that had come into her blood when he carried her up the stairs in his powerful arms, disdaining the offer of assistance from the suddenly infatuated Tommy Grav.

"Rehearsal at cleven sharp," announced Rushcroft. "Letter-perfect, every one of you. No guessing. By the way, Miss-er-'pon my soul, I don't believe I got your name?"

"Jones," said the new member, shamelessly.

Barnes went down to the dingy lobby. A single, half-hearted electric bulb shed its feeble light on the desk, in front of which stood a man registering under the sleepy eye of the night clerk.

Barnes was turning away when a familiar voice assailed him.

Whirling, he looked into the face of a man who stood almost at his elbow -the sharp, impassive face of Mr. Sprouse.

--- CHAPTER XX.

The First Wayfarer Has One Treasure Thrust Upon Him-And Forthwith Claims Another.

"What are you doing here?" demanded Barnes, staring. He seized the man's arm and inquired eagerly: "Have you got the jewels?"

"No; but I will have them before morning," replied Sprouse coolly. "Would you be surprised if I were to tell you that his royal nibs, is hiding in this town? Well, he certainly is. The Baroness Hedlund has been here for a week or ten days. She goes by the name of Mrs. Hasselwein. I popped down here this afternoon and found out that she is at the sanatorium, but that she expects to have tomorrow morning. I me "a and! an hour or so and then left. I fol lowed him. He went to one of the little cottages that belong to the sanatorium. I couldn't get close enough to hear what they said, but I believe he expects to take her away in an automobile early in the morning. It is a seventy-mile ride from here to the junction where they catch the train for the West. I'm going up now to make a call on Mr. Hasselwein. By the way, what is the number of your room?"

"Twenty-two-on the next floor." "Good. Go upstairs now and I'll join you in about ten minutes. I will tap three times on your door."

"Why should you come to my room. Sprouse? We can say all that is to be

"If you will look on the register you will discover that Mr. J. H. Prosser registered here about half an hour ago. He is in room 30. He left a call for five o'clock. Well, Prosser is another name for Ugo. He left the cottage an hour ago. Came in a jitney or I could have got to him on the way over."

Barnes, regardless of consequences, dashed over to inspect the register. Sprouse followed leisurely.

"See!" cried Barnes, excitedly, putting his finger on the name "Miss Jones." "She's in room 32-next to his. By gad, Sprouse, do you suppose he knows that she is here? Would the dog undertake anything-"

"You may be sure he dosen't know she's here, or you either, for that matter. The country's full of Joneses and Barneses. Go on upstairs. Leave everything to me."

Barnes had been in his room for stant the door closed behind him, he was brief: threw open his coat and coolly produced a long, shallow metal box, such as one finds in safety vaults.

"With my compliments," he said dryly, thrusting the box into Barnes' hands. "You'd better have the countess check them up and see if they're all there. I am not well enough acquainted with the collection to be positive."

Barnes was speechless. He could only stare, open-mouthed, at this amazing man.

"My God, Sprouse, have you been in that man's room since I saw you down-"

"All you have to do is to keep quiet and look innocent. Stay out of the hall tonight. Don't go near the door of No. 30. Act like a man with brains. I said I would square myself with you and with him, too. Well, I've done both. Maybe you think it is easy to give up this stuff. There is a half-million dollars' worth of nice little things in that box, small as it is."

"I cannot begin to thank you enough," said Barnes. "See here, you must allow me to reward you in some way commensurate with your—"

"Cut that out," said Sprouse darkly. "I'm not so virtuous that I have to be rewarded. I like the game. It's the breath of life to me.'

"The time will surely come when I can do you a good turn, Sprouse, and you will not find me reluctant," said Barnes, lamely.

"That's different. If I ever need a friendly hand I'll call on you. It's only fair that I should give you a tip, Barnes, just to put you on your guard. From now on, I'm a free agent, I want to advise you to put that stuff in a safe place. I'll give you two days' start. After that, if I can get 'em away from you, or whoever may have them, I'm going to do it. They will be fair plunder from then on. Good night-and good-by for the present. Stick close to your room till morning and then beat it with her for New member." He switched off the light suddenly. There was no sound for many seconds, save the deep breathing of the two men. Then, with infinite caution, Sprouse turned the knob and opened the door a half inch or so. He left the room so abruptly that Barnes never quite got over the weird impression that he squeezed through that slender

He did not close his eyes that night. Daybreak found him lying in bed, with the box under his pillow, a pistol at hand, and his eyes wide open. He was in a graver quandary than exec. Now that he had the treature in

"Nope! Seems like it's nothing serious: just beat up, that's all. Terrible cuts on his head and-"

"What time did all this happen?" "Doc Smith figgers it was long about midnight, judgin' by the way the blood co'gulated."

"Did they get away with much?" "Haven't heard. Seems as though the burglar—must ha' been more'n one of 'em, I say-wasn't satisfied with crackin' him over the head. He stuck the point of a knife or something into him-just a little way, Joe says-in more'n a dozen places. What say?"

"I-I didn't say anything." "I thought you did. Well, if I hear anything more I'll let you know."

Barnes listened at the door until he heard the waiter clattering down the stairway, and then went swiftly down the hall to No. 30. Mr. Prosser was sleeping just as soundly and as resoundingly as at midnight!

"By gad!" he muttered, half-aloud. Everything was as clear as day to him now. Bolting into his own room, he closed the door and stood stockstill for many minutes, trying to picture the scene in the cottage.

He found a letter in his box when he went downstairs, after stuffing the twenty minutes before he heard the tin box deep into his pocket. Before tapping on his door. He opened it and he slit the envelope he knew that Sprouse slid into the room. The in- | Sprouse was the writer. The message

With this thought in view I withdraw the two days' limit mentioned recently to you, and extend the time to one week. Yours very truly, "J. H. WILSON."

"Gad, the fellow thinks of everything," said Barnes to himself. "He is positively uncanny."

He read between the lines, and saw there a distinct warning. It had not occurred to him that his plan to leave for New York that day with Miss Cameron might be attended by disastrous

But the jewels? What of them? He could not go gallivanting about the country with a half million dollars' worth of precious stones in his possession.

He spent the early part of the forenoon in wandering nervously about the hotel-upstairs and down. The jewels were locked in his pack upstairs. He went up to his room half a dozen times and almost instantly walked down again, after satisfying himself that the pack had not been

For the next three days and nights rehearsals were in full swing, with scarcely a moment's let-up. And so the time crept by, up to the night of the performance. Miss Cameron remained in ignorance of the close proximity of the jewels, and the police of Crowndale remained in even denser ignorance as to the whereabouts of the man who robbed Mr. Hasselwein of all his spare cash and an excellent gold watch.

No time was lost by the countess in getting word to her compatriots in New York. Barnes posted a dozen letters for her; each contained the tidings of her safety and the assurance that she would soon follow in person.

Those three days and nights were full of joy and enchantment for Barnes. He actually debased himself by wishing that the Rushcroft company might find it imperative to go on rehearsing for weeks in that dim, enchanted temple.

He sat for hours in one of the most of sulphates. uncomfortable seats he had ever known, devouring with hungry eyes the shadowy, interested face so close to his own-and never tired.

On the afternoon of the dress rehearsal he led her, after an hour of almost insupportable repression, to the rear of the auditorium. Dropping into the seat beside her he blurted out, almost in anguish: ""

"Gosh," exclaimed the business man, "I had the disappointment of my life last night. Even this sunny morning can't take away the sting. For the past month I don't believe I have had one nice, quiet, peaceful night at homean evening of perfect relaxation. It seemed longer than that.

WATCH CREATION OF FLORA

Botanists Intensely Interested in Nature's Work on Voicano Island . In Bombon Lake, Luzon.

The destruction of vegetation in isolated regions is a matter of great inierest to botanists, who are making increasing efforts to observe the creation of the new flora taking the place of the old. Volcano island, in Bombon lake, Luzon, was chiefly covered by grasses and small trees before the eruption of the Taal volcano in 1911. but the eruption destroyed all plant life except some clumps of bamboos and a few bananas in the northern part of the island. In a report on the revegetation W. H. Brown, E. D. Verrili and H. S. Yates note that in six years 29 vascular plants had been recorded, the chief species being a few grasses. Of the total, 54 per cent were probably introduced by birds. about 20 per cent by the wind and about 10 per cent by the water-a different showing from that of the more exposed Island of Krakatoa, in the Strait of Sunda, where the chief work of birds was small. The growth of regetation in Volcano island is still sparse—a condition attributed to lack of proper soil and the ground's small amount of water and high proportion

STEERED BY SIXTH SENSE

Exploits of Blindfolded Norwegian Have Proved a Puzzle to Expert Danish Scientists.

Scientists in Denmark are puzzled by a Norwegian, one Emil Knudsen, who, although blindfolded and carefully watched, steered a steamer through the intricate channels of the harbor of Copenhagen, keeping a true course and adroitly dodging other vessels. He explains this by claiming the possession of a "sixth sense."

Knudsen is a man of middle age. When he came to Denmark from Christiania, he became at once an object of interest to both scientist and layman. He was put through many experiments by one of the leading nerve specialists of Europe, and as a result the specialist suggested the trip into the harbor. Knudsen said that he could guide himself anywhere without using his eyes, and a steamer was chartered to put him to a supreme test. Knudsen had no knowledge of the harbor. He requested that a person knowing the channel should hold two finger-tips against the side of his head. Professor Fridenreich consented to this, and himself pressed two finger-tips against Knudsen's temples.

The man handled the wheel without a sign of nervousness or uncertainty. It was impossible for him to see, yet he took more than a dozen sharp corners and followed a zigzag course throughout. All the scientists who witnessed the demonstration said that Knudsen possesses a mysterious power that actually may be a sixth sense.

INDIAN KNEW WHERE TO DIG

Red Man's Action and Finds Have Considerably Mystified Residents of Missourl Town.

The region about Caruthersville, Mo., is rich in lore about hidden gold and silver and mounds rich with pottery. Too, there are great, strange caves to be found thereabouts, never ending subjects for speculation and wonderment, say the Kansas City

A few years ago an Indian went to Caruthersville with several skin maps and dug up pottery that was worth several thousand dollars. He offered $1,500 to be allowed to dig into one mound near the town. However, the owner decided that if the mound was worth so much money for exploration purposes he would do the exploring. He did and found nothing.

Some time later the Indian returned to that section, hired a man with a wagon and team and drove out into the country to a spot where three dug down and unearthed two boxes, so heavy that a man could not lift one end of either. He had them shipped away and to this day their contents is a much discussed mystery of that locality.

Began Life in Coalpit.

Sir Joseph Cook the minister of the Australian navy and one of the commonwealth's delegates to the peace conference, began life in a coalpit in Staffordshire, England. While a working miner he sought to improve his education in every way, and in his spare moments in the pit acquired a knowledge of shorthand. At the age of twenty-five he decided to try his luck in Australia and went to New South Wales in 1885. He obtained work in a mine near Sydney and took an active interest in promoting the welfare of his fellow-workers. He then became secretary of the local miners' union and this proved the stepping-stone to political life.

French Train Operation Poor.

The French method of train operation differs sharply from the American. In the United States it is customary to move the trains by means of the block signal system, under the orders of train dispatchers. In France the chef de gare, a sort of sublimated station agent, is supreme. He is in absolute charge of all trains that pass through his station and of the allotment of cars within his district. A through train having reached his station, it cannot leave without his permission. This practice brings about such a condition that fewer trains are operated over a French double-track line than could be handled over an American single-track line equipped with block signals and dispatchers.

Wood for Cotton.

Wood is now being converted by a new process into a substitute for absorbent cotton-a product which is being supplied to the government by one mill at the rate of several tons a day. This absorbent wood is of great value in covering and stanching open wounds.

The wood is ground up and then spun or rolled out into pure white sheets resembling cotton batting, and is so light and bulky that only about 4.000 pounds of it can be packed in an ordinary box car. This substance costs 28 cents a pound.

SUNKEN CARGOES

American Ingenuity Makes Practicable Reclamation of Invaluable Supplies.

BE GREAT INDUSTRY

One of Greatest Coal Fields in World Lies Off Atlantic Coast-To Be Brought Up by Submarine Salvaging.

Boston.—One of the greatest coal fields in the world lies off the Atlantic coast from Norfolk, Va., to Boston. It is made up of cargoes of sunken ships which lie on the Coor of the ocean, and soon will be brought to the surface by means of a great after-war industry, known as the submarine salvaging of sunken cargoes. which will be the means of reclaiming millions of tons of coal, scrap iron and other raw products long since abandoned as lost.

The United States is taking the lead of all nations in fostering this great industry which grew out of the war, when the efficiency of the submarine as a monster of frightfulness was demonstrated. Peace will allow the submarine to come into its own &s a great reciamation agency.

In Long Island sound there lie a million tons of coal, of which, it is estimated by salvaging experts, at least 25 per cent is reclaimable at a cost of about 25 cents per ton. Reclaimed coal sells at the market price of $10 or $12 a ton.

By means of the salvaging submarine it is possible to cover 20 square miles of ocean bottom a day in searching for sunken hulks. Once a wreck is located it will be a simple matter. now that the salvaging submarine is as perfect as the torpedoing submarine, to reclaim 300 tons an hour, and to locate half a dozen ships in as many hours.

Coal All Along Coast.

Along the sound from Bridgeport to Norfolk, Conn., 40,000 tons of coal were sunk last year alone. Similar coal wealth awaits a finder all along the coast, for, according to marine rulings, "findings is keepings," and the finder of the sunken cargo is the owner.

The reclaiming of wealth given up for lost when the boat which carried it sank is to be one of the most fertile fields of production of the reconstruction period. The perfection of the salvaging submarine makes possible and practical an enterprise that was beyond the scope of the most daring and doughty divers who sought to find sunken cargoes.

This is illustrated by a comparison of the work of the old-time divers with the mechanical work of the salvaging submarine. A diver named Hooper held the record for immersion when he went down 180 feet in 1884 to reclaim the gold which sank in the Alphonso AH off the Canary islands. Hooper made 13 different trips to the wreck in as many months. So arduous and fatiguing was the descent that he was able to remain only 15 minutes each time before he signaled for the return journey. It took him four hours to make the descent, because of the necessity of accustoming his body by degrees to the increased pressure. The last time he went down he became paralyzed and was obliged to come up leaving $150,000 in gold behind him-which still awaits a finder. In all he brought up $350,000. Today the salvaging submarine goes down at the rate of a foot a second, and the diver can remain a month in it if he desires, working an eight-hour day or however long his day may be. The materials salvaged are pumped to the surface by means of a 15-inch pipe, which will bring up 300 tons of coal or scrap iron in an hour, and place it on the dack of a cargo carrying steamer nearby. An entire cargo is thus salvaged in a few hours, and the work of locating and salvaging another wreck immediately undertaken. Works Many Economies.

In the matter of economy of time and money, the saving of the strength of the divers and in locating with dexterity the whereabouts of sunken cargoes, the salvaging submarine compares with the old-time method of picking up materials from the ocean's bed as does a high power motorcar with a one-horse shay.

Coal is decidedly improved by a repose of many years under sea, for marine salts enter its porous exterior and increase its power of combustion for both domestic and industrial Pig iron has been salvaged after a stay of 100 years in the farthest depths. Rails are brought up in good condition also. Copper bars, brass and all sorts of machinery are recovered in good condition, for although every metal has a different life, the sediment in the water forms a conting over the materials and preserves them. If copper and steel are near each other in a cargo, the copper will eat the steel and destroy it, so strong is the electrolytic action.

The strap Iron reclaimed in this way is sorted out, some going to rolllas mills, others to brass foundries and all filling the world's constantly increasing demand for iron. In the The state of the s

After conferring here with members of the executive committee of the Wisconsin drive and canvassing leading breeders in many sections of the state, officials of the United States department of agriculture decided to start a similar but more extensive movement throughout the entire country.

The plan as announced by E. B. Reid of the department's office of information, who conferred with the Wisconsin officials, is to hasten the replacement of the multitude of scrub domestic animals in the United States with pure-bred or high grade stock and also to improve the quality of pure-breds themselves. It has been evolved through long and careful observation of the livestock industry in this country and after extensive consultation with specialists and

Nation's Average Low

"For many years this country has contained thousands of the finest specimens of live stock in the world, but in spite of that fact the quality and productive capacity of the average farm herd and flock is still low. For instance, the average dairy cow in the United States yields about 4,000 pounds of milk a year, a figure scarcely twothirds the average production in some European countries, such as Denmark. The United States has thousands of cows which have milk yields of more than 12,000 pounds—double the Danish average-but on the other hand it has hundreds of thousands which are kept for milk and yet yield only a small fraction as much product as the best cows, though receiving nearly as much feed and care.

"The difference in milk yield is due in large measure to a difference in breeding, but a herd of low production can be improved rapidly by the use of a pure-bred sire from a family of high producers.

More Sirloin per Animal

"Among all classes of live stock a similar condition exists. Proper breed- attend the encampment.
The company met at and more uniform stock, having a greater percentage of desirable cuts of meat and a smaller quantity of bone, offal, and inedible parts. Likewise in swine, sheep, goats and poultry production, the kind of parent stock largely determines the quality and market value of the products. In most live stock regions of the world a gradual evolution toward better live stock has been taking place for centuries. The rapidity of these changes has an important bearing on world commerce and on the prosperity of the nations in which improvement has been greatest." While in Wisconsin, Mr. Reid expressed special interest in the many examples of community effort here which have resulted in marked live stock progress in small areas. The Islands of Jersey and Guernsey, familiar examples of this kind of accomplishment, are to have their counterpart on Washington Island getting off from the mainland of the Door peninsula.

Nation Will Benefit Officials at Washington are convinced that it is possible to hasten the natural course of live stock improvement with benefit to the nation and are confident that the live stock men of the country are eager to undertake the task.

Once the use of pure-bred sires becomes general throughout the country, the process of grading up will be rapid. Many experiments and also practical experience, when good sires are used, show that within three generations most of the individuals in a scrub herd | business girls over 20, whose work headed by a pure-bred male resemble pure-bred animals in appearance. In a few more generations, under skillful breeding, the former scrub stock is graded up in the production of meat and other animal products.

Official Emblem To Be Furnished

The department of agriculture through its co-operative state agencies is preparing to furnish an official emblem, suitable for display, to every farmer agreeing to use only pure bred sires and in other ways to cooperate in the better-live-stock effort. To obtain the emblem a farmer or breeder will be asked to fill out a sim ple blank showing the number and more. kind of live stock he possesses and also to declare that nil his male breeding animals are pure breds.

Response to Will of People

For several months Mr. Reid and his associates have been making an analysis of live stock sentiment as expressed in the farm press and in correspondence received in various of-He has found that of all the topics discussed the need for a better quality of domestic animals has been

> A program was held in the Normal auditorium this morning between 10 and 11 o'clock. President John F. Sims introduced J. L. Sturtevant of the Wausau Record-Herald, who delivered in interesting and inspiring address to the student hody and other friends of the school who were present. In his opening remarks, the speaker of the Postal Telegraph Co., announced commented on the likeness of educational and newspaper work. "The Gospel of Service" was the subject of latley. He indicated, however, that his address, and Mr. Sturtevant characterized the true ideal in life as being of service to others. His address was well presented and the several points he established were interspersed with appropriate anecdotes.

Following the address, two pleasing solos were rendered by Miss Winne Delzell, after which the program was One bid was received at Grand Rapids concluded by the singing of "America" on Wednesday, which was in excess of by the entire audience. led by Prof. H. Daily Thought

As a vessel is known by the sound, whether it be cracked or not, so men are proved by their speeches, whether they be wise or foolish.-Demosthenes.

POST WAR EFFICIENCY DEMANDS SPEED FROM HEN (By United Press)

La Crosse, August 1-The hen of the future must yield from two or three eggs a day to cope with standards of efficiency imposed in post-war readjustments and the high cost of living. That this can be done is the solemn view of experts after studying Biddy the phenomenal hen owned by Gustave Rhodes of this city. Professor J. G. Halpin of University of Wisconsin poultry department saw her lay nine eggs in forty-five minutes recently and the next day seven in half an hour. Biddy is merely in term, rendered in compliment to nearly training for her work when she is to 50 young men and women who have perform for the multitudes at county completed their work at the state fairs this fall. Prof. Halpin believes institution here. The enrollment for it possible to cross breed poultry for the past six weeks session exceeded greater production as it has been possible to increase the yield of cows by

STATEMENT IS CORRECTED

The statement in the Journal of Friday that Rev. A. Held. pastor of the German M. E. church, is to retire from active church work, is corrected by a member of the congregation. It is now stated that Mr. Held was superannuated a year ago, but will continue to conduct regular services at his church, at a stipulated salary, as long as the congregation remains large enough to warrant it. The negotiations for the sale of the church property, which now appear favorable, will not affect the congregation's plans as the building will be available for use for services at any and all times.
